ST KILDA'S FIRST FINAL

St Kilda, a foundation member of the VFL, first appeared in the finals in 1907. The club had enjoyed little success in the VFL prior to this. In each of the competition's first six seasons (1897-1902), St Kilda had finished on the bottom ladder, winning only two games of the 99 games they played. They improved to fifth place in 1903 with seven wins and a draw (from 17 games) but then finished eighth in 1904 (3 wins; 14 losses), seventh in 1905 (4 wins; 13 losses) and sixth (6 wins; 11 losses) in 1906. The 1907 season was the first in which St Kilda won more games than they lost, the club finishing with nine wins and eight losses to take third position on the ladder. Thereby, the Saints faced Carlton, who had finished on top of the ladder, in their first ever final. In the first round of the 1907 season St Kilda defeated Carlton by 26 points at Princes Park, this being their first VFL win at Carlton's home ground and only their second win over the Blues in VFL competition. In the return match at the Junction Oval in Round 8, Carlton won by 29 points. The semi final was played before a crowd of 26,100 at the MCG. Unfortunately for St Kilda, it turned out to be a one-sided affair with Carlton leading at every change and eventually running out winners by 56 points. The final scores were Carlton 13.13 (91) to St Kilda 4.11 (35). Mick Grace (pictured taking a mark during this match) kicked four goals for Carlton and Dick Harris three, while Dave McNamara booted three of St Kilda's four majors. Carlton went on to play South Melbourne in the grand final, winning a close encounter by five points to make it two premierships in a row. The Blues then captured another flag in 1908 to become the first VFL club to win three premierships in succession.

A PEEP INTO THE ROOMS

The Melbourne Punch football columnist "System" visited the rooms of both clubs before the 1907 semi final: Carlton's dressing-room is characteristic of their play – The veterans take things calmly, getting their rub and chatting easily about the coming match. No excitement is noticeable, the trainers do their work quietly and well, and their charges look fit for anything as the sunlight streams through the window on their muscular bodies, everything is done quietly and orderly.

St Kilda dressing-room is the reverse of Carlton. Everything is bustle and excitement. Barrackers, players, trainers, boots, togs and a stray dog are all tangled up together. One celebrated player puts his trousers on the wrong side round. Another togs himself and is wearing his ordinary boots for ten minutes before he discovers his mistake. The whole room is one babble.

Carlton and St Kilda have only played two draws in AFL/VFL competition. The first of these was in Round 16, 1950, at Princes Park – Carlton 12.11 (83) drew with St Kilda 11.17 (83). The second was in Round 14, 1956, also at Princes Park. In this match, the scores were not only tied at full-time, Carlton 8.18 (66) to St Kilda 9.12 (66), but also at quarter-time, 4.3 (27) apiece, and at three-quarter time, Carlton 7.15 (57) to St Kilda 8.9 (57). St Kilda led by six points at half-time.

PLAYED FOR AND COACHED BOTH CLUBS

Alex Jesaulenko played 256 games for Carlton from 1967 to 1979, kicking 424 goals. He was a member of the Blues' 1968, 1970 and 1972 premiership sides and led them to another flag in 1979 as captain/coach. In fact, he was the last playing coach to win an AFL/VFL premiership. Following pay disputes with the club in 1977, Jesaulenko tied his ongoing presence at Carlton to club president, George Harris, remaining in the position, and when Harris was ousted from the presidency at the end of the 1979 season, Jesaulenko decided to leave the Blues. In a deal managed by St Kilda club president, Lindsay Fox, he moved to St Kilda in 1980. While initially acquired as an on-field player only, he was appointed playing coach when the incumbent coach, Mike Patterson, was sacked after Round 2. Jesaulenko played 23 games (20 goals) for the Saints in 1980 and 1981, retiring as a player after Round 8, 1981. He stayed on for a further season as coach in 1982. He was the last person to serve as a captain-coach in the VFL (Malcolm Blight was a playing coach at North Melbourne until Round 16 of the same season, but was not captain during this time). After being captain/coach of Sandgate in the Queensland Football League in 1983 and 1984, Jesaulenko returned to the coaching role at Carlton during the 1989 season after the sacking of Robert Walls. He remained as coach in 1990 but was replaced by David Parkin in 1991.
